Let the Renovation Begin!

Two local television stations and two newspapers joined over 100 people at San Joaquin College of Law's Ground Breaking Ceremony on May 6. Dirt flew as SJCL Board Members, donors, Clovis City Officials, Student Bar and Alumni Association Representatives and Dean Pearson officially started SJCL's renovations of the "Old Clovis High School" building. We were also honored to have the oldest living Clovis High School graduate, Kelsey Eugene Davis, assist us with "breaking the ground." Mr. Davis is a 1922 graduate of Clovis High School.

Dr. Bill Stewart, Chair, SJCL Board of Trustees led the speakers at the celebration. John Loomis (one of the founders of SJCL), Clovis Mayor Harry Armstrong, Clovis City Manager Kathy Millison and Dean Pearson all reflected on the historic occasion.

After the official ceremony, guests were invited to partake of refreshments, to view the building plans and renderings, and to tour the building. Special thanks go to Trading Post Ace Hardware for the donation of 15 shovels for the occasion. Also, a big thank you to Lou Gentile of Gentile's Flower Basket for the donation of corsages and boutonnieres. Mr. Gentile generously volunteered his work after hearing about the ground breaking ceremony. He attended the first ground breaking of the "Old Clovis High School" and wanted to contribute to this one.

22nd SJCL Commencement

Fifty-three San Joaquin College of Law students joined the ranks of SJCL alumni on May 25, 1996 at the William Saroyan Theatre. John Loomis, one of the Law School's founders and SJCL Board Member welcomed the crowd of 700 people to the ceremony. Full-time faculty member Richard Cartier read the student-written autobiographies as they walked across the stage to receive their degrees from Dean Janice Pearson. Associate Dean for Academic Affairs Sally Perring and Adjunct Professor Deborah Owdom ('76) "hooded" the students with doctoral hoods. Dean Pearson as "Teacher of the Year" introduced the Salutatorian, Lori Anderson, who delivered the Graduate Address. Reverend Robert Scott Murray, brother of graduate Susan Murray, led the ceremony's Invocation and Benediction. A champagne and hors d'oeuvres reception followed the ceremony at the Saroyan Theatre.

Commencement Speaker, Nadine Strossen, National President of ACLU visited with the graduates during an informal lunch before the ceremony. Her commencement speech urged graduates to stand up and speak out for their rights and the rights of others.

Congratulations to all the graduates in the Class of 1996! ♦

Things are happening at 901 Fifth Street. Fast. Renovation work at the new SJCL began May 6, 1996 and is proceeding more rapidly than was anticipated. It is even possible SJCL will move earlier than planned--perhaps in late October.

As the process evolves, it is also clear that the final building will be wonderful, far beyond our expectations. The interior demolition is finished, removing old flooring, outdated bathroom fixtures, and unneeded walls. The entire auditorium has been opened up and is a sight to see. It is cavernous. The original hand-painted molding is virtually intact.

The foundation for the library addition was poured the week of May 28 and framing is well underway. Removal of the old windows and creation of the "walk-through" from the main library room to the addition bring a flood of light into the interior library...airy and bright, a delight in which to read. The elevator shaft has been cut. The new roof is nearly complete. The skylights, hidden for years, have been unearthed and refurbished. SJCL staff has begun picking carpet and tile colors.

The City of Clovis is renovating Veteran's Memorial Square just to the west of the new SJCL. Slated for completion around June 15, this development will place us in a truly campus environment. There will be extensive grass, benches under shade trees and turn-of-the-century lighting. The Clovis High Class Stones have been successfully relocated out of the high-traffic areas, and broad sidewalks created. Imagine study groups or small classes meeting on the lawn on spring evenings. Envision truly pleasant places for breaks--on a bench in the twilight breeze in the summer or in the cozy Student Lounge upstairs in the winter. Imagine holding Moot Court competitions in our own courtroom with wood paneling and a public address system. Imagine a desk without a half-dozen boxes tucked underneath it.

There have been a few surprises. The old empty septic tank found in the crawl space was filled with concrete and buried. A coyote apparently lived there for many years but has moved on. Kittens in the attic--I've adopted them, and they are doing fine.

To date, over $435,000 has been donated to the Capital Campaign for the building project. To complete the renovation, $750,000 is needed. In the interim, SJCL has obtained a loan from Clovis Community Bank and has borrowed from its own Reserves and Endowment to get the project underway. The Reserves and Endowment will be reimbursed as pledges are received. Solid Reserves and an Endowment Fund are as important to retaining WASC accreditation as the building itself. Moreover, the grand old building we will soon occupy will need and deserve new exterior paint. That will have to be planned for over the next few years.

But as I walked about our new home last week, even that concern couldn't dampen my enthusiasm. In fact, I was so inspired by what I could see the future will be, I increased my own personal donation to the Building Fund...paid a little at a time over the next two years--I'll manage it. What a spectacular new home this will be the best of the old and the new!

A Contribution to SJCL is More than Money Simply Changing Hands!

It's ensuring a quality legal education for Valley residents from all walks of life for years to come.

It's a larger facility for all components of SJCL to be under one roof and continued WASC accreditation.

It's more books and other media in a larger library.

It's a nationally-recognized law review.

It's increasing the Endowment to take SJCL closer to ABA candidacy.

Although the Law School fund raising efforts have been focused on the Building on Success Campaign for the past 18 months, the Annual Fund Drive has not been forgotten. Donations made during the Annual Fund Drive can be designated for any area of San Joaquin College of Law that the donor chooses.

Donations toward the Endowment Fund are added to the permanent Endowment Fund. Neither the principal nor interest is spent on the operating costs of SJCL. (Any money temporarily borrowed for building renovation will be replaced.) In just over ten years, this fund has reached $310,000.

Donations toward the Library come at an exciting time in the Library's history. At the new building, the Library will have two floors with space for new books and other needed library equipment. A donation for the Library during the Annual Fund Drive will buy these books and equipment.

Donations for the Law Review go toward the costs of producing the San Joaquin Agricultural Law Review each year. Volume 5's symposium on marketing orders piqued the interest of law firms, governmental agencies and ag-related groups across the country. Every volume of SJALR published increases SJCL's reputation as a Law School.

Yearly, an independent auditor reviews records and ensures that donations are used for the donor's requested purpose. So, choose your area of interest and mail in your check today. Your tax-deductible contribution to SJCL is much more than just "money changing hands." It's a new building, expanded library services, an increased endowment, a law review devoted exclusively to agricultural law and much more. It's San Joaquin College of Law and the Central Valley working together to ensure SJCL's success into the future.

Dana Hunt

Dana joined San Joaquin College of Law as Staff Accountant on April 1, 1995 after working two months on a temporary basis. Previously, she worked at the CPA firm of Gray and Associates in Stockton. Dana received her B.S. in Business Administration with an emphasis in Accounting from University of the Pacific in May 1993.

"The best part of my job is the staff I work with here at SJCL," Dana says. As the Staff Accountant, Dana administers the accounts payable and the Tax Deferred Annuity Program for the College. She oversees all the operating aspects of the bookstore and also manages the LEXIS®-NEXIS® accounts.

"The LEXIS MVP Program is great for small law firms and now, small accounting firms," Dana says. "Those who don't have access to all the text and research materials that they need, can have access to an abundance of information, case law, statutes, public records, and law reviews. The service is also available to SJCL students for their research."

"I'm looking forward to moving to the new campus. The building has the atmosphere of a 'real' school," Dana continues.

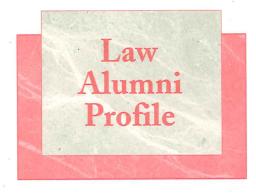

Dana's parents live in Madera. Her dad is a farmer, and her mom is a kindergarten teacher. Dana's brother, Robert, works at the Tenaya Lodge in Yosemite as the Recreation Director. Her hobbies include horseback riding and flying lessons. She also likes to travel. Dana traveled throughout Europe and the western states for about six months after leaving Gray & Associates.

Thanks, Dana, for all you do for SJCL!♦

Margaret Shainberg ('93)

by Pat Pinto ('94)

"I couldn't see myself retiring from the nursing profession and staying home to dust," Margaret (Peggy) states. When most people slow down professionally, she began a new endeavor as a law student.

A graduate of the 1993 class of San Joaquin College of Law, Peggy reflects on a different era. "When I graduated from high school, women were encouraged to either teach or go into nursing. Schools did not advocate alternative career choices." Tuition, for her nursing degree from UCLA, was $50 a semester. "I wasn't saddled with large student loan payments; therefore, I was able to work in Europe and Alaska after graduation."

"The Law School's attainment of a new campus is exciting." Peggy recalls one evening when she was nervously preparing for her Moot Court Class while walking down the narrow main hallway, "Donn Furman came out of the restroom, and literally, we ran into each other. I went flying while thinking, if I break my leg now, that's all I need." The irony—Peggy's Moot Court partner, Susan Shampanier ('93), actually did break her ankle later—the result of a bicycle accident, though!

"I believe the academic atmosphere of the planned Clovis campus will only add to San Joaquin's appeal." Peggy quickly adds, "but there will always be the underlying level of personal attention and camaraderie between students and faculty." Deciding to tackle law school was not an easy task. Peggy retired as a public health nurse from Mariposa County. The commute presented additional obstacles and a part-time physical separation from her husband, Howard. "Renting a small apartment, and commuting weekends was a challenge."

"The Bar Exam added a new dimension to the meaning of stamina," Peggy states, "I did not succeed on my first attempt; however, with all the support of family, good law school friends, faculty and co-workers, I jumped through the window and passed."

Peggy works four days a week as Deputy District Attorney for Mariposa. "I really love going to work. The cases are interesting. I am learning a lot, and co-workers are great!" She reaffirms her decision to let the dust sit and attend law school. "We have five attorneys in the office. Three are women.
Times have changed."

"You know, the Mariposa Court House is the oldest functioning court house west of the Mississippi," states Peggy, with a degree of pride. "Working in a historically registered building might be romantic, but modern conveniences, such as air conditioning, are fairly new." In fact, the pot-bellied stove, in the Courtroom, was used for heat at the time of John C. Fremont's trial.

Peggy views the new location of SJCL as a benefit for both the community and the Law School. "The school's profile is enhanced by preserving the 'Old Clovis High School.' Many residents are former students with fond memories of the old school."

She is community oriented. This fact is reflected in her thoughts on her role as Deputy District Attorney. "Mariposa is a small community with the same problems as a large one. The increase in juvenile crime is disturbing. I know so many of the families from my work in the health field."

In addition to an annual month-long camping trip to Mexico, Peggy and Howard sail. Their home, tucked in the mountains of Mariposa, reflects memorable travel items as well as antiques. They salvaged old doors and windows to create a feeling of the past in their contemporary home.

"I am fortunate to have good friends who encourage my endeavors," says Peggy. She confides that a more recent accomplishment is a hand-made knitted sweater that took 'Best of Show' at the fair last fall. Way to go, Peggy!

Her gentleness is matched by her graciousness. Peggy concludes by expressing her gratitude to SJCL for a stimulating, challenging education where she met many good friends.

Doug Noll

"I know I have a reputation for being tough and demanding when it comes to students' writing skills," Doug says. "I believe that writing is a reflection of a person's thought process. Sloppy and poor writing reflects sloppy and poor thinking. Ninety-nine percent of a lawyer's job is written, and I want to make each student the best thinker and writer possible. I make the same demands on myself that I ask of my students."

Doug received a B.A. with distinction in English Literature from Dartmouth College in 1973. He chose to attend law school to refine his analytical abilities. After he graduated from University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law in 1977, he wasn't sure he wanted to practice law. A classmate, Judge Bert Levy, convinced him to come to Fresno to clerk for the late Hon. George A. Hopper, who was an Associate Justice for the Fifth District Court of Appeal. After one year as a law clerk, Doug joined the Law Firm of Lang, Richert & Patch in 1978. His principle practice is in Complex Civil Litigation.

Doug started teaching Remedies at SJCL in 1986. He was named "Teacher of the Year" in 1990 along with Sally Perring. "What I enjoy most about teaching is how you learn from it. Each year, I learn ten times more than the students." Doug is a natural teacher who has also taught rock climbing, kayaking, skiing and martial arts.

Doug is involved with SJCL in many areas. He is the co-founder of San Joaquin Agricultural Law Review, and serves as an Advisory Board Member and a Faculty Advisor for the Law Review. His article "Analysis of the Central Valley Project Improvement Act" in Volume 3 was part of the symposium on the Act in that Volume. "Water resource policy is an interest of mine," Doug says.

"When the idea of a symposium came about, it was just natural for me to continue my research on the C.V.P. Improvement Act and write the article."

Doug also serves on the Faculty Committee, Admissions Committee and as a Board Member of SJCL. "I'm a two-year member of the Board of Trustees of the Law School," Doug says. "My role now is to listen and learn. On the other hand, on the Faculty Committee, I am one of the rabble-rousers."

"I think that the move to the Clovis building is exciting," Doug says. "It will give the Law School an unique identity in California. It is an opportunity for SJCL to springboard to ABA Accreditation and develop its endowment. This move will open a whole host of opportunities for the Law School."

Doug and his wife, Jan, live in the foothills outside Clovis. His many hobbies and interests reflect a lifestyle that includes no television. He is a student and teacher of Tai Chi. He is a second-degree black belt, plays Irish fiddle and sings in a band called Rosin the Bow, fly fishes and plays tennis. Doug has been a ski instructor since 1969 and is fully certified by the Professional Ski Instructors of America. In addition, he is an instrument-rated pilot in single-engine planes and flies helicopters. Doug is also a white water river guide who has gone on several group trips with Dean Pearson.

Thank you, Doug, for all you do for San Joaquin College of Law!♦

Marketing Order Case to be Heard before Supreme Court

The first noncriminal case from the Valley to go before the Supreme Court in 23 years has those involved with San Joaquin College of Law represented on "both sides" of the argument.

Tom Campagne ('75): represents Wileman Bros. & Elliot Inc., Gerawan Farming, and Kash Inc. in addition to 13 other tree fruit packers in the Valley.

Dan Bensing (Adjunct Faculty Member): will be working with other Justice Department Attorneys to prepare briefs for this case.

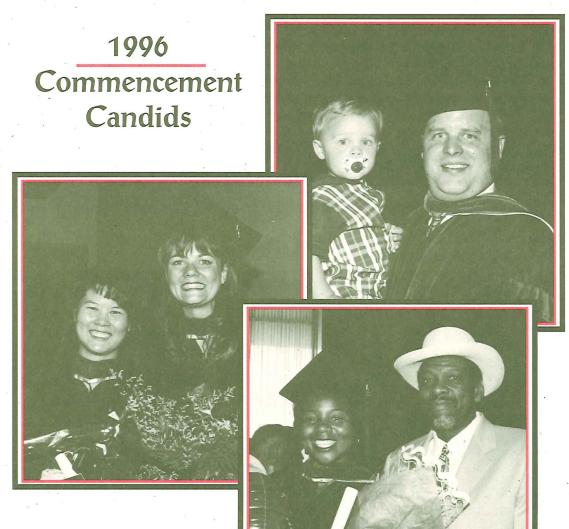

One of only 35 cases that the Supreme Court agreed to hear for the next term thus far, the case will be argued this Fall and is believed to be the first generic marketing case to reach the court since marketing orders were created in the 1930s.

The Supreme Court will review a 9th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that said generic advertising violated the First Amendment right of growers who wanted to conduct their own advertising and marketing of peaches, plums, and nectarines. The Federal Government appealed to the Supreme Court.

The contemporary regulatory framework underlying marketing orders is the result of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, which has been amended periodically since its adoption.

A symposium of articles (including an article by Dan Bensing) and comments regarding marketing orders was the focus of San Joaquin Agricultural Law Review, Volume 5. If you are not already a subscriber, and you would like a copy, please contact Karen Besecker (225-4953) for more information.

SJCL Family Picnic

On May 19, approximately 40 people attended the SJCL Family Picnic sponsored by SJCL's Student Bar Association, Delta Theta Phi and La Raza Law Student Association at the Valley View Picnic Area in Woodward Park.

This free picnic for students, faculty, staff and their families celebrated the end of the school year. The barbecue feast of hamburgers, hot dogs, potato salad, sodas, etc. was enjoyed by all. Any extra food was donated to the Evangel Home. Many thanks to the student associations for planning and participating in this event. •

A Few Changes in MCLE at SJCL

As many of you know, Michele Creighton has left SJCL to pursue her Master of Science Degree in Nursing. At the present time this position is not going to be filled, and Sydney Fournet, MCLE Administrative Assistant will be joining the Advancement Department.

San Joaquin College of Law will continue to offer live and video replay quality programs at a competitive price, thus saving professionals time and money that would otherwise be spent on out-of-town programs. If you have any questions regarding MCLE programs offered by SJCL, they can be directed to the Advancement Department.♦

New In-Kind Gift Program at SICL

San Joaquin College of Law through The Wright Agency of Fresno, who represents the Chadwick Financial Corporation, now has the ability to accept a wider variety of in-kind gifts. In-kind gifts are non-cash donations, such as office equipment and law books. Through this new program, SJCL can now receive noncash donations such as excess inventories, real estate, vehicles, and many other items with a resale value of over $5,000. The Chadwick Financial Corporation will assess, market and convert the item to cash for SJCL.

The ability to accept a wider range of gifts benefits both SJCL and its donors. SJCL can receive gifts that previously it could not accept, and staff time will not be spent in selling such gifts. Donors benefit from the tax considerations of donating the non-performing asset to SJCL, a non-profit institution. Of course, the extent of any tax benefit needs to be discussed with a donor's CPA on an individual basis.

For more information on this exciting opportunity, please contact Kristin Robinson, Associate Dean for Advancement, at 225-4953.

Breakfast Evening

It has been suggested that we vary the times of the alumni gettogethers. The next time to meet informally with fellow alumni--a request from the Alumni Surveys--will be at 5:30 p.m. on June 28 at the Silver Dollar Hofbrau (333 E. Shaw). This is your opportunity to "catch up" with alumni and find out what's going on at the Law. School between Inter Alia issues. For more information, contact Kristin, Catherine or Karen.

Paralegal Profile Correction

We regret that Deborah Anderson's name was misspelled in the April 1996 issue of Inter Alia. Jim Petrucelli and Deborah are members of a seven-member Commission for Advanced California Paralegal Specialization, Inc. formed in conjunction with CAPA and NALA in the development of the CAS exam. Also, Deborah is not the current local CAPA representative. We apologize for any confusion caused by April's "Paralegal Profile."
